

Possible Crime Victim Compensation, A Resource Explaining Options

This resource discusses patterns of emotional manipulation that can be painful to revisit. Please take time and pause if needed. Engagement with this information is entirely within your control. Safety and well-being are what matter most.

Emotional and psychological abuse alone traditionally do not qualify for Crime Victim Compensation programs. However, compensation may be possible when the abuse is connected to qualifying crimes such as threats of physical harm, stalking, harassment, domestic violence, or other crimes recognized by state law.

Eligibility requirements and possible benefits vary by State. To learn more, please visit, State Crime Victim Compensation Program, and select the State of residence. A helpful video from the Office for Victims of Crime has been included below.

If compensation is unavailable or law enforcement involvement is not desired, Victim Assistance Programs may still provide support. Victim advocates, shelters and community organizations may offer counseling, safety planning, legal advocacy and other services independent of the criminal justice system.

Additional resources relating to possible compensation are available:

- Office for Victims of Crime (OVC) Overview:
<https://ovc.ojp.gov/help-for-victims/overview>
- National Association of Crime Victim Compensation Boards (NACVCB)
<https://nacvcb.org/victim-compensation/>